

Glover, Kaechele to lead Board

Henrico's Board of Supervisors began 2012 by tapping its two most experienced members to head the body for the coming year.

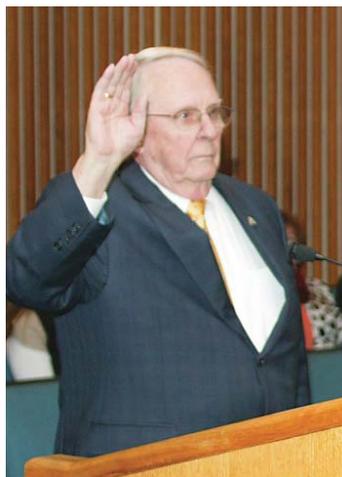

At its Jan. 10 meeting, the board elected Brookland District Supervisor Richard W. Glover as chairman and Three Chopt District Supervisor David A. Kaechele as vice chairman. Each will serve a one-year term.

The two have a combined 54 years of service on the board. Henrico will draw on that experience in 2012, a year that could present "the most difficult budgetary challenges this county has faced," according to County Manager Virgil R. Hazelett, P.E.

Glover is beginning his fifth term as board chairman, a position he held most recently in 2006.

First elected Brookland District supervisor in 1987, he will mark his 24th year on the Board of Supervisors in 2012. He served on the county's Planning Commission before joining the board.

Glover has held leadership positions on a variety of national, statewide and regional governmental organizations, including the National Association of Counties' (NACo) Transportation steering committee, the Virginia Municipal League's (VML) Community and Economic Development policy committee, the Virginia Association of Counties' (VACo) Community Development and Planning steering committee and the Richmond Regional Planning District Commission. He also serves on Henrico's Board of Social Services and the board of the Capital Region Workforce Partnership Consortium.

Glover is a lifetime member of the Glen Allen Youth Athletic Association and the Hermitage High School Band and Auxiliary Boosters. A native of Victoria, Va., he is a veteran of the U.S. Navy.

David A. Kaechele, Vice Chairman, Three Chopt District Supervisor

The longest-serving member of Henrico's board, Kaechele was first voted to represent the Three Chopt District in 1979 and since has been re-elected to the position eight times. He is embarking on his 32nd year on the board in 2012 and will serve his seventh term as the body's vice chairman.

Kaechele has held leadership positions on a variety of national, statewide and regional governmental organizations, including the NACo Finance and Intergovernmental Affairs steering committee, VACo's Finance steering committee and board of directors and the VML Finance policy committee.

History-rich John Rolfe Parkway opens final leg

The smooth asphalt of John Rolfe Parkway takes only a few minutes to drive, but its history is spread over decades.

In November, Henrico County opened the final section of the four-lane, divided parkway, from Ridgefield Parkway to Pump Road.

The road, with curb and gutter and sidewalks, has quickly become a vital north-south link for western Henrico, carrying between 5,000 and nearly 11,000 vehicles per day along its entire three-mile stretch

She has served on the boards of directors of the Greater Richmond Partnership and the Virginia Coalition for Open Government and the board of trustees of the Henricus Foundation. But the parkway, which cost $28.9 million to complete, is also significant because it highlights early planning efforts for the metro region's outer suburbs, as well as Henrico's vision and commitment to serving the long-term interests of residents, said Robert C. Tiesman, P.E., capital projects coordinator for the Department of Public Works.

"I think, in many ways, it's a success story of county leadership ... and not shifting with the wind," he said. "In '66, who could have envisioned the county would look like it does now?"

In 1966, Henrico officials identified the parkway corridor for a limited-access, regional highway — state Route 288 — that was to circle from southern and western Chesterfield County. At the time, Henrico had an estimated 143,200 residents — less than half its current total — and the western area was sparsely developed.

Voted Fairfield's supervisor for the first time in 1995, Thornton is entering his fifth term on the county's board.

To promote orderly development, the Board of Supervisors adopted in 1979 a Major Thoroughfare Plan that included the parkway corridor and helped to reserve the land for construction.

But in 1988, the region's plans for the western leg of Route 288 changed, in part because of development elsewhere in the path. The Virginia Commonwealth Transportation Board voted to route the highway, including its bridge over the James River, about three miles farther west. That pushed Route 288's northwestern portion out of western Henrico and into eastern Goochland County, forcing Henrico officials to rethink their plans.

"We retained this corridor because we still felt like we needed it," Tieman said.

In redesigning the parkway for local traffic, officials settled on a name to honor English colonist

County Manager Virgil R. Hazelett, P.E. (left), Three Chopt District Supervisor David A. Kaechele, Tuckahoe District Supervisor Patricia S. O'Bannon and Deputy County Manager for Community Operations Timothy A. Foster, P.E., cut a ribbon Nov. 8 to mark the opening of the John Rolfe Parkway.

John Rolfe. In 1612, Rolfe began growing mild Varina tobacco in present-day Henrico, which gave the settlers a profitable cash crop. His eventual marriage to Pocahontas, daughter of Chief Powhatan, further aided the colony by establishing a period of peace between the settlers and Native Americans.

Today, Route 288 loops from western Chesterfield and eastern Powhatan County into eastern Goochland, where it joins Interstate 64. The interchange between I-64 and Interstate 295 sits about three miles east of Route 288 and is directly north of where John Rolfe Parkway intersects with West Broad.

"We get questions every week, 'Why can't you connect the two?'" said Tieman, who cites federal policies that prohibit joining local roads and interstates.

The parkway's southern-most section, from Lauderdale to Ridgefield, opened in 1998. The northern-most stretch, from the area of Pump and Church roads to West Broad, followed in phases through last year.

On Nov. 8, Three Chopt District Supervisor David A. Kaechele, Tuckahoe District Supervisor

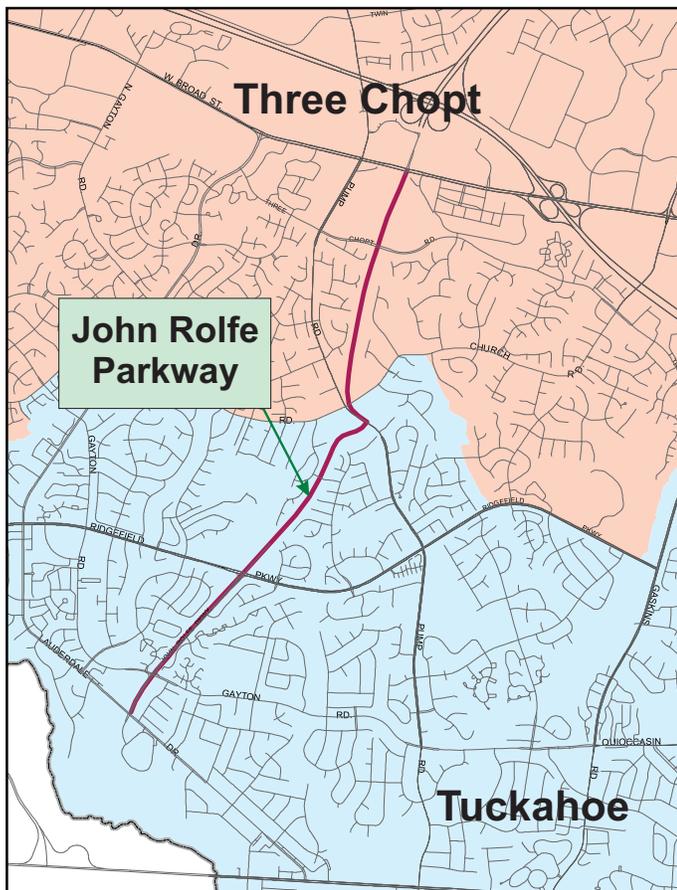

Patricia S. O'Bannon, County Manager Virgil R. Hazelett, P.E., and then-Director of Public Works Timothy A. Foster, P.E., snipped a red ribbon to celebrate the opening of the middle section, from Ridgefield to Pump. The event coincided with festivities recognizing Henrico's 400th anniversary as a permanent English settlement.

"This is an event that is 400 years in the making, because, to some, I am sure it feels like John Rolfe himself may have proposed the road," said Foster, who has since been promoted to deputy county manager for community operations.

For a road that took 45 years to finish, the parkway's final segment actually opened four months ahead of schedule.

Tieman said many factors contributed to the road's deliberate march to construction, including design changes, funding issues and extensive work with residents and property owners along the corridor. Officials prepared more than 10 scenarios for how the parkway could cross through the area of Pump and Church. Ultimately, the project relocated a portion of Pump, north of Church. A section of the parkway now connects sections of Pump that were split. Overall, the project provided 3.8 miles of new road.

For the area between Ridgefield and West Broad, the county acquired 151 parcels but avoided condemnation proceedings in all but four cases. Only one of those cases went to trial.

Hazelett, who began his work for Henrico in 1972 as a traffic engineer, said the parkway project has been guided by many officials and has sparked numerous public debates over the years.

“However, when all is said and done, the county has proceeded in a proper fashion, addressing the concerns of the public, whether they were dealing with impacts on the environment or the acquisition of property needed,” he said.

Though the parkway is now open, the project isn’t technically finished. A final phase of work, which is not scheduled or funded, would widen sections of Pump from two to four lanes. Those improvements aren’t quite as pressing as they once were because the parkway has relieved traffic pressure on Pump, as well as on Cox Road to the east. It also has eased congestion at West Broad’s intersection with Pump/Pouncey Tract Road.

The Department of Public Works is now focusing on two other road projects for western Henrico.

The $48.4 million North Gayton Road extension, which was authorized by voters through the 2005 bond referendum, is expected to open later this year, connecting West Broad to Pouncey Tract at Shady Grove Road, via a six-lane bridge over I-64.

Design work is underway to widen Three Chopt Road from two to four lanes in the area of John Rolfe Parkway to Gaskins Road.

Encapsulating 2011 —Project culminates county’s 400th anniversary

Henrico put the wraps on its yearlong 400th anniversary celebration — and sent a collection of contemporary objects on a journey to the future — when county officials, staff and residents gathered in December to dedicate the 2011 Room.

A 50-year time capsule, the 2011 Room — located just inside the entrance to the Government Center Administration building, in a space that once housed pay telephones — is targeted for unsealing in 2061.

“Everything depicting life in 2011 is here,” said County Manager Virgil R. Hazelett, P.E. “Henrico officials will get a sense of our time when they take off this door in 50 years.”

The 2011 Room contains several devices that currently qualify as high-tech, such as a Kindle reader, a laptop computer and a BlackBerry. It also holds items related to Henrico government and schools in 2011: a desktop telephone and county phone directory, the Vision 2026 comprehensive plan, school yearbooks, a photo of the new Glen Allen High School, and a collection of student essays imagining life in 2061.

Also included are DVDs of historical documentaries produced by HCTV; issues from the Henrico Citizen’s series on the key events in county history; a water bowl from the dedication of Dorey Dog Park; a signed copy of “Hell’s Corner” by best-selling author and Henrico native David Baldacci; a “Welcome to Henrico County” road sign; and a 400th anniversary lapel pin.

All told, more than 200 objects were nestled into the former phone booth. The room features a wrap-around timeline depicting significant people and events from Henrico’s first 400 years, while photos of current county facilities, events and students highlight a back wall.

No space went unclaimed in the 2011 Room, including the back of its imposing wooden door. A few dozen ceremony participants used highlighter pens to autograph the door before it was bolted into place.

The dedication of the 2011 Room culminated the yearlong commemoration of Henrico’s quadricentennial anniversary, which featured educational and cultural programs, living-history presentations, museum displays, bus tours of historic sites, festivals and other activities. More than 66,000 people attended the events.

MetroCASH, Henrico team up for free tax service

Eligible Henrico taxpayers can receive free help preparing and filing their 2011 tax returns and applying for the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) at sites hosted by MetroCASH and Henrico.

The county and MetroCASH — a coalition of social service, nonprofit, faith-based, business and government organizations — have launched their annual efforts to help working families get the most out of their tax returns. This year marks the 10th year for the free service.

“We encourage Henrico residents to take advantage and avoid paying high fees to have their taxes prepared,” said Extension Agent Kim Edmonds, who helps coordinate Henrico’s participation in MetroCASH. “All residents who qualify or think they may qualify need to know about the Earned Income Tax Credit. It could potentially boost their refunds by hundreds of dollars.”

The EITC is a refundable credit aimed at helping working families and individuals who file a tax return and meet income requirements. Designed to reduce the tax burden and supplement wages, the credit could increase a federal refund by as much as $5,751 for families with three or more children and $464 for individuals.

To qualify for the EITC, residents must meet the following income requirements for 2011 (the incomes listed are for married couples filing a joint return; in each category, the income limit is $5,080 less for single-parent families):

- Earned less than $49,078, with three or more qualifying children;
- Earned less than $46,044, with two children;
- Earned less than $41,132, with one child; and
- Earned less than $18,740, with no children.

Volunteers are helping eligible taxpayers prepare and file electronic returns at 13 MetroCASH sites throughout the metropolitan area, including two in Henrico: Dumbarton Area Library, 6800 Staples Mill Road, 4-8 p.m., Thursdays through April 12, and 4-8 p.m., Wednesdays Feb. 29 to April 11, and Fairfield Area Library, 1001 N. Laburnum Ave., 9 a.m.-1 p.m., Saturdays through March 10.

Last year, MetroCASH volunteers helped area residents file 2,093 tax returns, generating $932,216 in EITC funds and a total of $2,577,886 in federal refunds. The free service saved its clients an estimated $418,600 in preparation fees. The additional funds benefit the local economy as well: more than 80 percent of EITC refund dollars remain in the community where they are received, according to the organization.

Many area residents miss this opportunity, however. MetroCASH estimates that up to 25 percent of eligible taxpayers fail to claim the Earned Income Tax Credit.

Henrico employees help Santa fill stockings

Henrico County government employees opened their hearts and wallets to brighten Christmas for nearly 2,000 families in need.

With the encouragement of 2011 Christmas Mother Bonnie Abernathy, employees donated about three truckloads of bicycles, toys, blankets and other items, plus $13,275 in cash to the nonprofit Henrico Christmas Mother organization.

The volunteer-supported group is still counting all of its contributions for 2011, but organizers expect to match the 2010 totals of $170,000 in cash and $189,000 in in-kind gifts.

The 2011 Christmas Mother program supported 1,978 families in Henrico, which included 6,069 individuals. Both represented slight increases over the previous year’s totals.

Abernathy (center) kicked off the county employees’ fundraising and toy drive with (appearing left to right) Tanya Harding, deputy clerk to the Board of Supervisors and campaign co-chairwoman; County Manager Virgil R. Hazelett, P.E.; Santa Claus; and Lisa Orlosky, technology support specialist IV and campaign co-chairwoman.
