

What kind of tree is that?

Now's a great opportunity to enjoy spending quality time with your family and make it educational too by learning a bit more about the great outdoors! Create your own book of tree foliage by pressing leaves from different trees in your yard or neighborhood.

1. Find some good old heavy books, put your leaves between the pages and close it tight. You can even put something heavy on it for more pressure.

2. After a week or so you can place your pressed leaves in a sheet protector or on contact paper.

3. If you don't know much about the tree, investigate online what kind of tree it is and some of its characteristics. Then create your own book of trees! It's a great learning tool for the kids!
