

Board of Supervisors re-elected intact: All five incumbents return for fourth term together

As residents of a free society, where government is run by the people, our voice is in our vote. The results of Election 2007 indicated an enthusiastic nod of approval to the Henrico County Board of Supervisors when voters reelected each incumbent member.

Despite Henrico's steady population growth and the high rate of turnover among local elected bodies, the Henrico County Board of Supervisors has stayed intact for 12 years, and its members will be serving together for another four years.

According to the Executive Director of the Virginia Association of Counties, Henrico has achieved the distinction of being the most stable county board of supervisors currently serving in Virginia. No other county in the state has experienced the re-election of all of its incumbent members to a fourth term. In fact, Henrico County has not experienced a four-term board since the County Manager Form of Government was adopted in 1933.

The following members of the Board of Supervisors will begin serving the new, four-year term on Jan. 1, 2008.

Richard W. Glover, Brookland District Supervisor

Dick Glover will serve his sixth consecutive term on the Henrico County Board of Supervisors, having been first elected in 1987. Glover served as the board's chairman in 1992, 1996, 2001 and 2006.

Before being elected to the Board of Supervisors, Glover served on the Henrico County Planning Commission for three years, and has since served on a variety of other state, local and regional boards and commissions.

Dave Kaechele, known to his colleagues as the "senior member" of the board, will begin his eighth term on the Henrico County Board of Supervisors. Kaechele, a 47-year resident of Henrico, was first elected to the board in 1979, and has served as the board's chairman six times: in 1983, 1987, 1990, 1995, 1998 and 2003.

In 1993, Kaechele retired from Reynold's Metals Company as a senior development engineer. He earned his bachelor's degree from Michigan State University, is a U.S. Army veteran and serves on numerous governmental and civic boards and commissions. He has two children and five grandchildren.

O'Bannon is a native of the Richmond area, and has been a Henrico resident for 33 years. She has remained actively involved in civic associations and state and national governmental committees during her tenure with Henrico County. She earned her bachelor's degree from VCU and is a Certified Planning Commissioner. O'Bannon is married to Del. John M. Real estate tax relief to expand, continued

Henrico's Real Estate Advantage Program in 2007, and another expansion of the program — set to take effect at the start of next year — promises to extend tax relief to even more county residents.

The newest change: beginning Jan. 1, the qualifying household income limit will increase to $62,000, up from $52,000. Henrico officials are encouraging seniors and disabled residents to examine the program's new parameters to determine if they qualify.

When it approved the 2007-08 operating and capital budget earlier this year, the Henrico County Board of Supervisors adopted several enhancements to the Real Estate Advantage Program, also known as REAP. The changes have boosted program eligibility while also significantly increasing tax relief.

"The goal in the 2007-08 budget was to fully eliminate the real estate tax for the majority of our senior and disabled households," said County Manager Virgil R. Hazelett, P.E. "Our Board has continued its aggressive efforts to provide this tax relief and ease the burden faced by our residents living on fixed incomes."

Income level grows to $62,000

One of the largest programs of its kind in Virginia, REAP has grown to more than 4,500 participants in 2007, up from 3,760 in 2006. The Henrico program will provide more than $6 million in tax relief this year, an increase of more than $2 million from the previous year.

More Henrico homeowners stand to receive tax relief when the household income cap increases to $62,000 on Jan. 1. This limit excludes the first $10,000 of annual income for each relative — other than the owner and spouse — living in the home. (For a resident to qualify for REAP, he or she must own and occupy the real estate and must be 65 or older, or permanently and totally disabled.)

"The $62,000 maximum is really a soft cap, when you account for the $10,000 exclusion for relatives," said Revenue Division Director Ed Trice. "Our homeowners really should take a close look at this change."

Changes help homeowners

In addition to the income change, Trice urged residents to examine the REAP enhancements that took effect earlier in 2007:

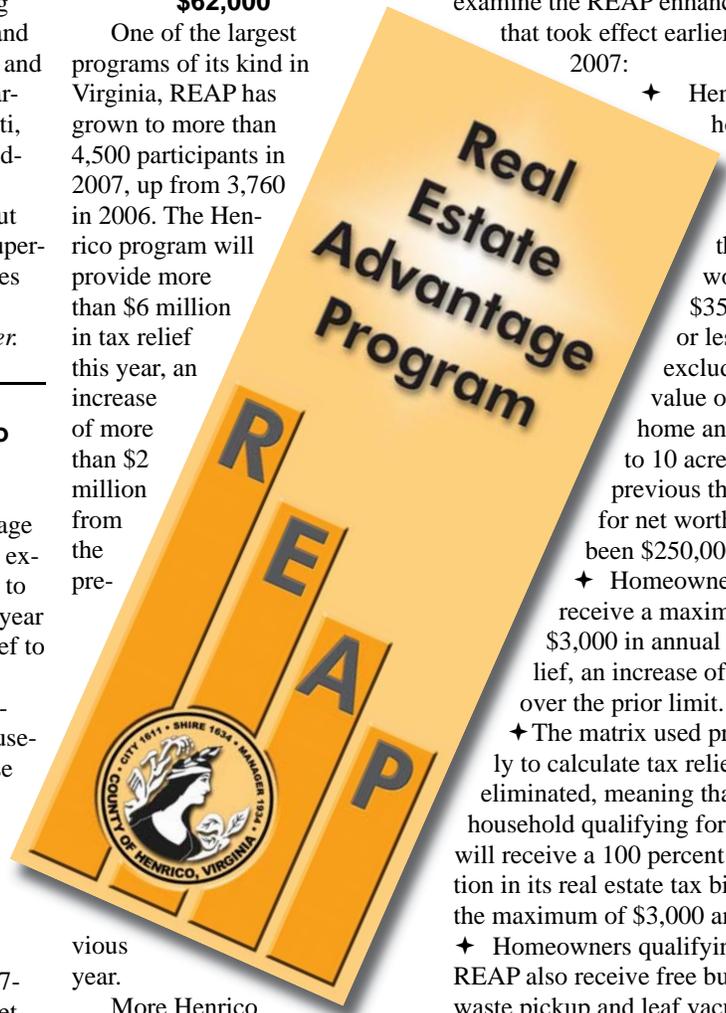

- ✦ Homeowners qualify if their net worth is $350,000 or less, excluding the value of the home and up to 10 acres. The previous threshold for net worth had been $250,000.

- ✦ Homeowners can receive a maximum of $3,000 in annual tax relief, an increase of $1,000 over the prior limit.

- ✦ The matrix used previously to calculate tax relief was eliminated, meaning that any household qualifying for REAP will receive a 100 percent reduction in its real estate tax bill, up to the maximum of $3,000 annually.
- ✦ Homeowners qualifying for REAP also receive free bulky waste pickup and leaf vacuum service from Henrico's Public Utilities.

The changes provided substantial savings for many Henrico families. The average relief award grew by nearly 40 percent in 2007 — to a little more than $1,400 per household, compared to $1,050 in 2006.

"This is a significant amount for residents living on a fixed income," Trice said. "They can redirect the funds that would have gone to their real estate tax bill to other needs, such as health care and food.”

The deadline for homeowners to apply for REAP is April 1, 2008. First-time filers and hardship cases can be considered through Oct. 31, 2008.

“We encourage all residents who think they may qualify to apply, even those who think they may be borderline,” Trice said.

For more information about REAP, or to obtain an application, call 501-4263 or visit the Finance Department’s Revenue Division at the Henrico Government Center, 4301 E. Parham Road. Information and applications are available online as well: log on to www.co.henrico.va.us/finance and follow the link for Real Estate Tax Relief.

Boys of summer come to Henrico —Glen Allen Stadium also a star at Babe Ruth World Series

The air has cooled within the confines of Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park, and the ping of aluminum bats, pop of leather gloves and other sounds of youth baseball have subsided for the season.

But the triumphant first year of Henrico’s landmark youth baseball facility — highlighted in August by the Babe Ruth Baseball 14-Year-Old World Series — has left an indelible mark on the area’s youth-sports scene.

Over a six-day period in late August, the state-of-the-art Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park hosted 25 games, more than 130 players on 10 teams and hundreds of family, friends and fans from around the country. Henrico’s Division of Recreation and Parks, which owns and operates the stadium, worked in cooperation with the Glen Allen Youth Athletic Association (GAYAA) to put on the event.

‘Incredible response’

Recreation and Parks Director Karen Mier spoke with many of the family and fans who attended the games. The conversations followed a common theme.

“No matter what part of the country they were from, the family members and players were overwhelmed by the quality of our facility,” Mier said. “None of them had played in a facility the caliber of Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park. The response to the stadium was incredible.”

The visitors also were impressed by the quality of service and attention to detail of Henrico’s Recreation and Parks staff, Mier said. More than 20 staff worked nearly around the clock over the course of the world series, providing field preparation, inclement weather support and custodial services.

Staff stayed busy, persevering through rain delays and a series of late-summer storms to maintain the field and keep the pool-play format world series on schedule. Eight teams from around the country — Connecticut, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Florida, Missouri, Arkansas, Idaho and Arizona — won regional tournaments to advance to the title round. The Virginia state champion from McLean and the host team from Glen Allen also competed.

After a stirring run into the semifinals and third place finish by Glen Allen’s host team, the squad from Chandler, Ariz. claimed the title with a last-inning rally against Tallahassee, Fla.

Stadium stars

The presentation of trophies to the champs from Arizona culminated a whirlwind period for Henrico Recreation and Parks, GAYAA and Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park.

Henrico voters approved funding for the stadium in a March 2005 bond referendum, and construction began in August 2005. The Babe Ruth League, Inc. — which consists of nearly 890,000 youth baseball and softball players who compete on some 45,200 teams in more than 7,300 leagues worldwide — awarded the 14-Year-Old World Series to GAYAA, the host league, in March 2006. The stadium was home to its first game in March 2007 and was officially dedicated in ceremonies in April.

One of the stars of the world series — in addition to the young athletes who competed in the event — was the stadium itself.

Designed to evoke classic, early 20th-century ballparks such as Wrigley Field and Fenway Park, the stadium features dimensions approaching a big-league park, measuring 350 feet to center field and 312 and 298 feet down the lines in left and right fields, respectively. Rows of trees stand beyond the outfield wall. Two authentic boxcars, including one outside the left field fence, are incorporated in the stadium’s and park’s railroad-theme design. Eight light towers allow play to continue into the night.

While its looks may recall an earlier era, the $4 million stadium boasts an array of 21st-century features. The modern facility includes covered bleachers with more than 630 individual seats and lawn seating for hundreds more; spacious sunken dugouts with two-row seating, a restroom and telephone; a large digital scoreboard and message board; a press box with a public address system and an audiovisual system that can film games; and an irrigated playing field engineered for quick drainage. Fans can enter the left-field boxcar and watch games through its windows or on a pair of LED monitors receiving images from the press box.

Generating business

While the Babe Ruth World Series helped showcase the ballpark, the weeklong event also offered a boost for area businesses, providing an economic impact of more than $842,000.

Amateur sporting events play a significant role in the local economy. In the 2006-07 fiscal year, adult and youth tournaments and special events hosted by Henrico throughout the county had an economic impact of more than $29.1 million, according to Recreation and Parks.

Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park further strengthens the county's position as a destination for amateur sporting events, Mier said.

"Henrico County enjoys a really good partnership with our youth athletic associations," she said. "We look forward to hosting more high school events at the stadium, as well as other youth athletic association events and tournaments."

Emergency Notification System available to residents

Many Henrico residents are now receiving emergency information firsthand, thanks to the county's Emergency Notification System (ENS). But residents who haven't registered for the service can still sign up at www.henricolert.com.

Launched last summer, ENS sends severe weather alerts and emergency bulletins to residents on their landline telephones, e-mail, cell phones, pagers, Blackberrys and other wireless devices.

The system is designed to enhance the county's ability to communicate with residents during extreme circumstances, such as Hurricane Isabel. The 2003 storm left many residents powerless, and thus unable to receive key information from traditional sources like local media, for several days.

ENS delivers information to residents in two ways: voice and text messages. Participation in the voice service requires no action; all residents and businesses with landline telephones are automatically included. Residents can subscribe to the system's text-message component by logging on to the Web site.

"The voice and text-messaging services are two new tools in Henrico's Emergency Alert System," said Emergency Manager Anna McRay. "They aren't replacing any of the traditional ways our residents receive emergency information — they just give the county additional ways to provide residents emergency notification quickly."

The voice component uses reverse-911 technology to notify residents of emergency events on their home and work phones. Participation is not voluntary; all numbers in Verizon's enhanced-911 database are contacted when the voice service is activated, but it is free of charge.

Registration for the text-message component also is free.

Residents — and anyone else — can sign up their e-mail and any wireless device capable of receiving text messages. Although is activated. The voice system provides detailed information to specific neighborhoods and also can be used countywide when timeliness is less of a concern.

Henrico's Emergency Notification System can provide residents with critical information during an emergency through their landline telephones, e-mail, pagers, cell phones and wireless devices.

subscribers may be charged for messages by their service providers, according to the terms of their individual plans, there is no charge for e-mail messages.

When emergency information must be distributed rapidly, as with a tornado warning or similar life-safety event, the text system

"We encourage subscribers to register as many of their wireless communications devices as possible," McRay said. "Anyone with an interest in public-safety issues in Henrico is welcome to participate."

Neighborhood gem reopens

The refurbished Henrico Theatre in Highland Springs made its grand debut on Saturday, Oct. 27. A public open house and dedication marked the return of the neighborhood gem.

The theater originally opened on April 25, 1938 as a movie palace, when tickets were just 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. Now, after a $5.8 million renovation, restoration and expansion, the venue will host live theater, music, dance and film. The 400-seat theater features a vintage movie projector and beautifully restored art deco details. The facility can also be rented for recitals, concerts, group meetings and multimedia presentations.

The Henrico Theatre has a rich and varied history. During World War II, the theater was designated as a bomb shelter and is now listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Henrico County purchased the building at 305 E. Nine Mile Road in 1999 as part of the ongoing revitalization along the Nine Mile corridor. For more information about the Henrico Theatre or for program information, call 328-4491 or log onto www.co.henrico.va.us/rec.

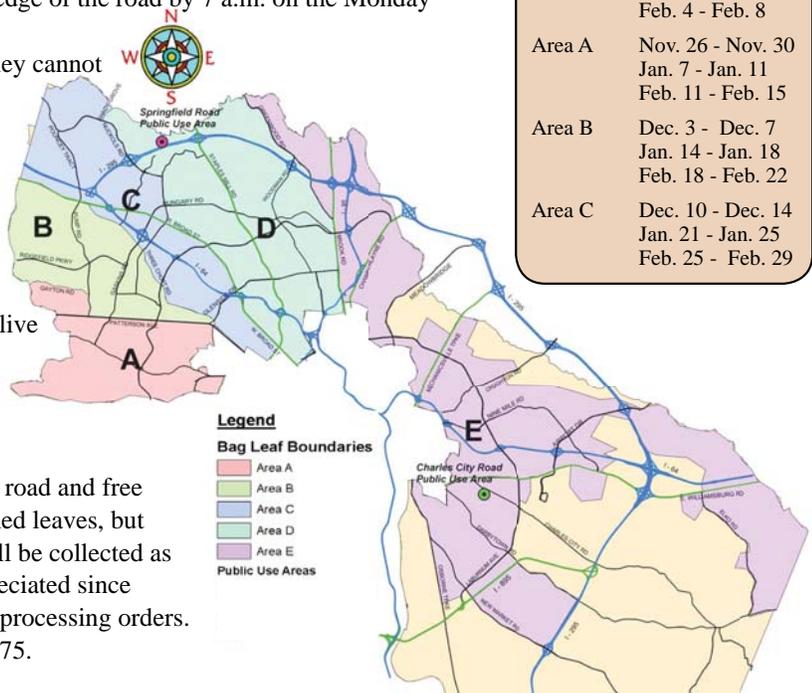

Annual leaf collection

The sections labeled on the map below designate the county's free bagged-leaf collection areas. There will be one pickup on every street during the weeks scheduled for each area. There is no limit to the number of bags you may bring to the curb during each of the three pickups. To assure the best service, please observe the following guidelines:

- ✦ If you live in a scheduled collection area, you do not have to call to place an order for the service.
- ✦ Bagged leaves must be accessible from the street or left at the edge of the road by 7 a.m. on the Monday of your collection week.
- ✦ Do not place garbage or debris in the bags with the leaves or they cannot be recycled.
- ✦ The county cannot provide a specific day of the week it will be in your neighborhood. Workloads vary during the fall and the first collections are usually heavy.
- ✦ The county frequently works weekends and during the holiday weeks in the heaviest collection periods.

If you have a question or concern about the program, or if you live outside the designated areas on the map, call 727-8770 for more information.

If you do not want to bag your leaves, vacuum service is available from Oct. 29 through April 25 for a $30 fee. Before requesting this service, make sure that leaves are at the edge of the road and free from trash, sticks and debris. Local farmers frequently use vacuumed leaves, but cannot use them if they are mixed with trash and sticks. Leaves will be collected as soon as possible once your order is received. Your patience is appreciated since weather conditions and heavy work volumes may cause a delay in processing orders. To order this service, log on to www.henricodpu.org or call 501-4275.
