

Henrico to Hold Special Election March 8: Voters to Decide on Bond Referendum and Meals Tax

Quality of life is a hard thing to measure. You can't touch it, smell it or hear it. But you can feel it, and you'd certainly know if it were missing. Here in Henrico, it's the quality of life we enjoy that makes our county one of the most desirable places in America to live and work. When we need emergency services, we call 911 and help arrives within minutes. We send our children to school each morning taking comfort in knowing they are learning in a top-notch environment with caring, professional teachers. When we fancy a bike ride or picnic in a clean, green, open space, we know a county park is right around the corner. When we need access to a public computer or want to devour the latest best seller, there's a library branch nearby. And when we want to get from here to there, we know we can do it with ease on the county-maintained road system.

These quality of life factors are what Henrico's all about. County staff strives to deliver these and other services to residents every day. "Level of service is something that will not be compromised in Henrico," is the mantra of County Manager Virgil R. Hazelett, P.E. He has said it time and again, and employees at all levels embrace the notion. As the county continues to grow, there are more people to serve — more children to educate, more traffic to accommodate, more neighborhoods to protect — and the increased demand for service requires funding.

Enter the bond referendum: local government's way of taking the question of funding to the people. A common practice through modern history, a bond referendum serves to determine the will of the residents when it comes to issuing debt to pay for capital projects. In a special election on Tuesday, March 8, categories: Schools, Libraries, Division of Fire, Recreation and Parks, Public Works Road Project and a Meals Tax.

Henrico voters will cast their ballots in a $349.3 million General Obligation Bond Referendum. A component of the referendum will ask voters to decide whether to pass a 4 percent meals tax on prepared foods, part of which would be used to cover bond debt and fund millions in needed capital projects, renovations and new facilities. Voters will be able to choose "yes" or "no" for each of the following six

One question in the forefront of many minds: what happens if the bond projects pass and the meals tax fails? "If our residents tell us that they are for the capital projects, then we have a moral obligation to complete those projects," Hazelett said. "This would create the very real possibility of a real estate tax rate increase in order to fund the projects and their associated operating costs.”

Henrico’s current real estate tax rate is 94 cents per $100 of assessed value. If the bond projects pass and the meals tax fails, the real estate tax rate could rise as much as eight cents to $1.02.

“Henrico’s real estate tax rate is currently the lowest of the 13 most urbanized cities and counties in Virginia, according to the City of Chesapeake’s annual city/county comparison study,” Hazelett said. “We are trying to hold the line, but cannot continue to offer the level of service our residents have come to expect without an additional funding source. That’s why we’re offering the meals tax as an alternative.”

Should voters approve the meals tax, Henrico would generate an estimated $20 million per year in new revenue. County officials project that about 40 percent of this would be paid by non-Henrico residents — people who commute into the county for work, business travelers and vacationers.

“We’ve put together a solid package that will address the needs of our residents as well as a viable funding source for these projects,” Hazelett said, “and now it’s up to the voters to decide.”

For more details about the bond referendum projects and the meals tax, visit the Web site at www.henricobonds.com, or tune-in to HCTV—Channel 37 to watch a five-minute public service announcement (the program will air multiple times each day through March 8). Organizations may request a speakers’ team to present information about the bond referendum and meals tax by calling 501-7880. Speakers will be available through March 7.

On Jan. 11, the Henrico County Board of Supervisors elected Fairfield District Supervisor Frank J. Thornton (middle) as chairman and Brookland District Supervisor Richard W. Glover (right) as vice chairman for 2005. They will each serve a one-year term. This marks the beginning of Thornton’s second term as Henrico County’s board chairman, a position he previously held in 2000. Thornton has represented the Fairfield District since 1995, when he became the first African-American elected to the board. Glover has served on Henrico’s board since 1987 when he was elected Brookland’s magisterial district supervisor.

The board presented Tuckahoe District Supervisor and 2004 board chairman, Patricia S. O’Bannon (left), a token of appreciation for her leadership. O’Bannon has represented the Tuckahoe District since 1995, when she became the first woman elected to the board.

Residents can REAP more rewards in 2005

—Real Estate Advantage Program expands eligibility, increases benefits

Henrico wants more of its residents to “reap” what they’ve sown and take advantage of an enhanced tax-relief program in 2005.

The Board of Supervisors has approved significant changes to the county’s Real Estate Advantage Program—popularly known as REAP—that will expand the number of homeowners eligible for the program and increase its benefits as well.

REAP is designed to ease the tax burden of qualifying elderly and disabled residents; the program typically saves participants from 50 to 100 percent on their real estate taxes each year. In 2004, participants received nearly $3 million in tax relief—an average savings of $900.

“REAP is a way for Henrico to show its appreciation to our senior and disabled residents for their many years of paying real estate taxes,” said Finance Director Reta Busher. “The program will be available to more residents in 2005, and its awards will be more generous. We hope everyone eligible takes advantage and applies for it.”

In addition to serving more residents, the program will provide more tax relief in 2005: the maximum award has been increased from $1,500 to $2,000.

To qualify for REAP, residents must own and occupy their dwelling and must be 65 or older or permanently and totally disabled. Other REAP criteria, enhanced for 2005, are:

- The limit for total household income—including the owner, spouse and any relatives living in the household—is $52,000 annually, increased from the 2004 limit of $45,000.
- When determining household income, the first $10,000 of each relative's income is now excluded, increased from the 2004 limit of $8,500.
- The net financial worth of participants is limited to $195,000, increased from the 2004 limit of $175,000.
- When determining net financial worth, the value of the dwelling itself and up to 10 acres of property are now excluded, increased from the 2004 limit of one acre.

REAP has grown steadily since its inception in 1973, when 270 Henrico residents participated; some 3,000 residents benefited from the program in 2004. County officials are working to spread the word further, sending videos to more than 100 local places of worship, placing brochures in county libraries and maintaining program information on the county Web site.

“There is a perception among some of our residents that REAP is a charity or welfare program, but that just isn't the case,” said Revenue Division Director Ed Trice. “REAP is a way for the county to give back to our elderly and disabled residents, many of whom may be on a fixed income.”

Residents may obtain REAP applications from the Henrico County Government Center, the Eastern Government Center, county libraries, or by calling 501-4263. Residents also may download application forms by logging on to the county Web site, www.co.henrico.va.us/finance, and following the link for “Real Estate Tax Relief.”

Along with the completed application, residents must submit documentation of all sources of income, net worth and age. Disabled applicants must provide disability certification or sworn affidavits from two licensed Virginia medical doctors.

Applications for 2005 are due no later than Friday, April 1.

Henrico's Civil War history brought to life —‘Henrico County – Field of Honor’ offers intimate look at county's key role in conflict

Hints and hallmarks of Henrico's Civil War history pass by the county's 21st-century residents each day. Now they have an expert to guide them through some of the key moments in the Civil War—and American history—that literally occurred in their own backyards.

Henrico County recently released “Henrico County – Field of Honor,” a groundbreaking study of the Civil War as it was experienced in one of the war's bloodiest and most significant battlegrounds—Henrico County, Va.

Commissioned by the county and written by acclaimed historian and archivist Dr. Louis H. Manarin, “Field of Honor” recounts the dozens of engagements—whether minor skirmish or major battle—that occurred in Henrico in spring 1862 and from September 1864 to April 1865. Manarin uses an array of documents and primary sources as well as cutting-edge, computer-mapping technology to provide an updated, comprehensive insight into the Peninsula and Seven Days campaigns, Seven Pines, to a central role in the Civil War once the city became the capital of the Confederacy. “Field of Honor” explains how the presence of the James River, major roadways and railroads—all Savage Station, New Market Heights, Yellow Tavern and other Henrico battles.

“Field of Honor” also examines the impact of war on Henrico's residents, adding their compelling personal accounts to the stories of individual soldiers and contending armies. Manarin's meticulous research includes details of Henrico geography, roadways and other physical features that bring the story of the war to a level especially intimate for the county's modern-day residents.

The gateway to Richmond, Henrico County was all but fated tracing routes to Richmond from each point of the compass—essentially ensured the Union and Confederate armies would wage major campaigns on Henrico soil. County battlegrounds produced more than 50,000 casualties and some 77 Congressional Medal of Honor winners, including 17 recipients from the U.S. Colored Troops. County battlegrounds witnessed the commands of Robert E. Lee, Joseph E. Johnston, Stonewall Jackson, George B. McClellan, Ulysses S. Grant, Phil Sheridan and other leading generals. County battlegrounds also witnessed the killing or mortal wounding of eight generals, including Confederate cavalry hero J.E.B. Stuart.

A two-volume set, "Field of Honor" is designed for professional and armchair historians alike. The lavishly illustrated work contains nearly 750 paintings, photographs and other images; it includes 17 original paintings, 15 commissioned specifically for this book. "Field of Honor" features 295 troop-movement maps, many of which were developed using Geographic Positioning System (GPS) technology and represent a new analysis of Henrico's battlefields.

"Field of Honor" costs $89.95 for the hard cover edition and $69.95 soft cover. Discounts are available for orders of 10 or more. Books may be purchased through the Division of Recreation and Parks; check, money order and Discover Card payments are accepted. To obtain an order form, log on to www.henricofieldofhonor.com or www.co.henrico.va.us/rec or call Recreation and Parks at 501-5102.

Coalition offers free tax help for Henrico families, individuals —Some taxpayers could see big boost in their refunds

Throughout Henrico, working families and individuals are receiving their W-2's, compiling the past year's receipts and making plans to file their taxes. Many residents, however, may be shortchanging themselves of thousands of dollars in income tax refunds. And they may not even know it.

Henrico County wants to make sure they get the refund they deserve, free of charge.

Henrico is again participating in the Greater Richmond Earned Income Tax Credit Coalition (GREITCC), a special organization of local governments, the Internal Revenue Service, private industry and nonprofit groups that has joined forces to increase public awareness of the earned income tax credit—a refundable credit for qualifying workers who file a tax return. Available to families as well as individuals, the credit could increase an eligible taxpayer's federal refund by as much as $4,300.

Since 2003, the GREITCC has provided free income tax preparation assistance for hundreds of eligible working families and individuals in Henrico and throughout the metropolitan area. The free service is available at several sites throughout the metro area, including one in Henrico.

GREITCC sites filed nearly 500 tax returns for qualifying taxpayers in 2004. As a result of the coalition's efforts, Henrico taxpayers claimed 9 percent more in earned income tax credit funds—some $2 million—in 2004 than the previous year.

But local taxpayers are still leaving a lot of money on the table: the IRS estimates that close to $5 million of earned income tax credit funds went unclaimed in the metro area last year.

Volunteers at GREITCC sites will help eligible taxpayers prepare and file tax returns and will provide childcare while taxes are being prepared. The free service is available to taxpayers who had:

- Adjusted gross income of less than $34,458 ($35,458 if married filing a joint return) and two or more qualifying children;
- Adjusted gross income of less than $30,338 ($31,338 if married filing a joint return) and one qualifying child; or
- Adjusted gross income of less than $11,490 ($12,490 if married filing a joint return) and no qualifying children.

Henrico's GREITCC site operates from 4-8 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday at the Human Services Building, 8600 Dixon Powers Drive. The site will remain open through Thursday, April 14.

For more information about eligibility, site location or other questions, contact the GREITCC at 649-1311 or log on to www.greitcc.org.

'Henrico County - Field of Honor' About the author:

Dr. Louis H. Manarin, historian and former state archivist of the Commonwealth, is the author, co-author and editor of 12 books on Virginia and North Carolina history, including "The History of Henrico County" and "The Wartime Papers of R.E. Lee." A longtime resident of Henrico County, much of his work focuses on the Civil War as it occurred in and around Henrico and Richmond.

Community Resource Guide: What's in it for me?

Barking dogs, noisy neighbors, trespassing and loud music—these are just a few of the topics covered in the county's Community Resource Guide. Henrico's Division of Police is pleased to offer residents this new and easy-to-use manual to help solve neighborhood problems that impact the quality of life.

“This document represents the true meaning of community policing, which is the philosophy and foundation of the division's mission,” said Henrico Police Chief Colonel Henry W. Stanley, Jr.

The Neighborhood Watch Executive Council initiated the guide, which took several years to complete. Former Neighborhood Watch Reporting Secretary Mel Solomon researched and developed the document with assistance from police officers, Neighborhood Watch members and other county agencies.

The result is a common sense, plain-language guide that continues to evolve as Henrico County grows and changes. The information-packed guide is a valuable tool that empowers residents to address certain neighborhood problems quickly and effectively, which often police cannot resolve.

As residents use the guide more frequently, the number of calls for police service should decrease, so more officers will be available to handle priority calls for service. By supporting and using the Community Resource Guide, you can help ensure future generations will enjoy the excellent quality of life we have become accustomed to in Henrico County.

The Community Resource Guide is available online at www.henricopolice.org or each county library has a copy in their reference section. You may print or copy the guide at the library for a nominal cost. Since the document is updated periodically as new information becomes available or as codes and laws change, refer back to the Web site or the library to acquire the most recent version each time you use the guide. This will ensure you have the most accurate and current information available.

“Together, we can prevent crime and disorder to maintain the high quality of life that makes Henrico one of the most desirable places to live, work and play in Virginia,” said Stanley.

For more information, contact Public Information Coordinator Crystal Martin at 501-5316 or mar12@co.henrico.va.us.

Conference to celebrate role of fathers

Henrico's Department of Social Services will celebrate fathers and the essential role they play in the lives of their children and community at the third annual Henrico Fatherhood Conference, Thursday, March 17, from 5:30-8 p.m. at The Place at Innsbrook, 4036 Cox Road in Glen Allen.

“The Many Faces of Fatherhood: What Makes a Dad Special” is free and open to the general public as well as social service professionals, civic and community organizations, faith-based groups and other agencies. Pre-registration is encouraged.

Children suffer financially, socially and emotionally when their fathers are not actively involved in their lives, said Social Services Director Gordon Ragland.

“Fathers are a critical part of their children's lives,” Ragland said. “If we're going to impact the quality of life of Henrico's children, we have to make sure their fathers are getting the support they need.”

The conference will feature a keynote address by Derius Swinton, an award-winning, internationally recognized motivational speaker, trainer and consultant whose topics include healthy lifestyles and environments, leadership and character development. Swinton has presented in South Africa, California, New York and throughout Virginia.

Another highlight will be the presentation of awards to the student winners of “The Many Faces of Fatherhood” photography, drawing, essay and poetry contests. The contests are open to Henrico elementary, middle and high school students; the deadline for entries is March 1. Call 501-7496 for more information.

To register for the Henrico Fatherhood Conference, call 501-4063. For more information, log on to www.co.henrico.va.us/dss and follow the “Fatherhood Initiative” link.

Public Utilities recognized for community contributions

On Mon. Jan. 17, the Board of Directors of Henrico County, Virginia Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Commemoration Association presented a resolution to Henrico's Department of Public Utilities and led a community tribute to thank staff for their loyal and faithful service. This was the 19th annual celebration to honor Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and his legacy of brotherhood among all people and to share with residents how government serves them. Pictured above are supervisors and staff from the Department of Public Utilities.
