Henrico County is taking "an aggressive strategy" says newly appointed Geographic Information Systems (GIS) Coordinator Alfredo C. Frauenfelder, as Henrico begins to literally map the complex utility and road networks, along with topographical features of its five districts. The combination of digital maps and an automated database will allow all departments in the County to collect, analyze, and manage information graphically.

"We're beginning the project from scratch and will be using state-of-the-art computers and software, along with existing surveyors' maps to tie the coordinates to actual ground units," said Frauenfelder. "From crisis management to routine analysis of problematic patterns detected through the data we gather, all departments in the County will benefit." He cited emergency situations from hurricanes to fires as examples when knowing the exact locations of gas lines and electrical wiring could be crucial in saving lives and property. "It's been said a picture is worth a thousand words," Frauenfelder added, "but a GIS map is worth a thousand pictures."

Frauenfelder, who has pioneered GIS programs for the Commonwealth of Virginia as well as for private firms, holds a master's degree in urban and regional planning from Virginia Commonwealth University (Richmond, Virginia) and a bachelor of science degree in geology from Western Kentucky University (Bowling Green, Kentucky). He is the contributing environmental columnist for Virginia Review magazine.

For the eighth consecutive year, the County of Henrico's Office of Management and Budget has received the Distinguished Budget Presentation Award from the Government Finance Officers Association of the United States and Canada (GFOA). Henrico met all four nationally recognized guidelines for effective budget presentation, including policy document, financial plan, operations guide, and communication device.

The GFOA is a nonprofit association serving 12,650 government finance professionals throughout North America. Since the inception of the awards program in 1984, only 700 entities have received the Distinguished Budget Presentation Award. Recipients are considered to have pioneered efforts to improve the quality of budgeting and provide an example for other governments across the continent.

The GFOA's is the only national awards program in governmental budgeting.

After 23 years with the County of Henrico, Building Official Roddy N. Shingleton will retire effective December 1, 1997; Shingleton has served as the building official for the past nine years. During the next ten months, he will assume the role as the permanent permits and inspections liaison for the White Oak Semiconductor Plant, the County's highest profile economic development project, now being constructed in the Varina District.

"We are creating a win-win situation for all of us," said Deputy County Manager for Community Development Harvey L. Hinson. "We will be sorry to lose Roddy, but before he leaves we can benefit from his expertise in an area that will be most advantageous to the County -- and that is overseeing the construction and building code compliance at White Oak," he said.

Shingleton began his career with Henrico County in 1974 as a civil engineer. From 1979 through 1987, he was the assistant chief of building construction and maintenance (now called "deputy building official") and was promoted to building official in 1988.

While Shingleton maintains resident building official status at the White Oak site, Deputy Building Official Gregory H. Revels will be acting building official for the County.

Fairfield District Supervisor Frank J. Thornton will hold a town meeting on Monday, February 3, at 7 p.m., at the Fairfield Public Library, 1001 North Laburnum Avenue.

"Library Matters" will be the topic of discussion, and Thornton encourages Henrico residents to attend.

"Our libraries offer many services, some of which our residents may not be aware," Thornton said. "I, along with several members of the Henrico County Public Library staff, will discuss the different, exciting ways that our community libraries can benefit us -- from the summer reading clubs and other children's services, to Internet access and the business resource center -- Henrico libraries offer so much more than just the privilege of checking-out books," he said.

Director of Libraries Gerald McKenna, as well as six other members of the library staff, will be on hand to lead the discussions and field any particular questions from the audience, Thornton said.

The public is invited to attend. In an effort to reach as many residents as possible, Thornton requests that each resident planning to attend invite three other people to come along.
