The Henrico County Community Emergency Response Team (HCCERT) will host the National Weather Service's "SkyWarn!" class -- which trains participants to become storm spotters -- at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, March 10, at the Henrico Training Center, 7701 E. Parham Road.

Class participants will learn to recognize and describe severe storms and other local weather systems, such as tornadoes, flash floods and thunderstorms, and will become part of the SkyWarn Spotter Network. The National Weather Service uses storm-spotter reports, especially in rural areas, to supplement its severe weather warning system.

SkyWarn! is free and open to the public, but registration is required. To register, call 337-1528 or e-mail henricocert@comcast.net. For more information, log on to www.henicocert.org.

Comprised of community volunteers, HCCERT provides immediate assistance in a neighborhood or workplace following a county emergency or natural disaster, when local public safety resources may be overwhelmed. HCCERT emphasizes disaster preparedness, basic first aid, search and rescue techniques and other emergency response measures.

The Henrico County Department of Social Services has received a $7,500 grant from the Family and Children's Trust Fund (FCTF) of Virginia to provide services and materials for the department's Fatherhood Initiative.

The grant will fund Fatherhood Initiative efforts to increase public awareness of family violence and its impact on youth. Social Services will partner with Henrico Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, the Virginia Department of Child Support Enforcement and other agencies to enhance community outreach efforts for male teens and their fathers to prevent and treat family violence.

Family violence includes child abuse and neglect, domestic violence, adult abuse and neglect, sexual assault and suicide, according to FCTF.

Henrico's Fatherhood Initiative works to increase awareness of the critical role fathers play in the lives of their children and to provide men with the services and resources they need to become responsible fathers and role models for their children. Program efforts include an ongoing support group that meets regularly to discuss a variety of fatherhood issues and concerns, such as the fathering of teens and school-age children, anger management, and coping as a stepfather or divorced father.

For more information about the Fatherhood Initiative, call 501-4061 or 261-8746.

The Family and Children's Trust Fund of Virginia is governed by a board of trustees that is appointed by the governor to raise and distribute funds for family violence prevention, treatment and public awareness.

The Henrico County Health Department has recommended that students riding a particular bus to Douglas Freeman High School be tested for exposure to tuberculosis.

Freeman High School sent letters on Thursday to parents of all students at the school, notifying them of the recommendations and identifying which students should be tested. Only students who have ridden the particular bus since the start of the school year need to be tested. This process is part of a routine contact investigation undertaken to identify students that would benefit from medication to prevent tuberculosis. The health department has determined that there is not increased risk to the student body in general.

Tuberculosis is caused by a type of bacteria that is passed from person to person through the air when the ill person coughs or sneezes. Some people exposed to the germ may develop infection without any symptoms. A relatively small proportion of people who become infected actually develop the disease, and this may take years to occur. TB disease is not easy to catch, and both TB infection and disease can be cured if a medical treatment plan is followed carefully. Individuals who are infected but do not have the active disease cannot give TB to others.

The Henrico Health Department will begin testing next week and will take several weeks to complete it. Testing is free of charge.

Henrico County Board Chairman and Fairfield District Supervisor Frank Thornton will host a special forum and public discussion to examine the local effect of the U.S. Supreme Court's Brown vs. Board of Education decision and to honor Oliver W. Hill, one of the key figures in the landmark 1954 school-desegregation case. The forum is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 24 in the Government Center Board Room, 4301 E. Parham Road.

"Brown After 51 Years: The Henrico and Richmond Perspectives" will feature a panel discussion on several topics, including the role of the press in reporting public reaction to the Brown decision; the pressure from the state of Virginia to adopt the policy of "Massive and Resistance" and the "Freedom of Choice" plan; the closing of schools and resulting cost to the community; and the experiences of students and teachers. There will be an audience question-and-answer period as well.

Serving as panelists are Earle Dunford, former editor and staff writer of the Richmond Times-Dispatch; Vonita Foster, Ph.D., executive director of the National Slavery Museum; Melton Jones, Ph.D., vice president of academic and student services at John Tyler Community College; John Kneebone, Ph.D., professor of history at Virginia Commonwealth University; and Shirin Spencer, an independent curator and educator.

The forum will also salute famed civil rights attorney and Richmond native Hill, whose legal work to desegregate Virginia schools played a critical role in the Brown case. Mr. Hill's numerous honors include the 1999 Presidential Medal of Freedom and the 2000 American Bar Association Medal.

"Brown After 51 Years" is free and open to the public. Seating is limited, however, and reservations are encouraged. Call 501-5736 to make reservations. For additional information about the forum, call 501-5125.
