Marshall honored for work promoting supplier diversity

Marvis W. Marshall, supplier relations manager for the Henrico County Department of Finance, was recognized by a regional organization for her commitment to ensuring diversity among suppliers in public procurements.

The Carolinas-Virginia Minority Supplier Development Council presented Marshall with the Supplier Diversity and Inclusion Champion Award at an annual awards reception last week in Hampton. The organization, which consists of corporations, financial institutions, government agencies and universities in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, works to expand opportunities for minority business enterprises.

“Marvis was personally honored by her peers for her dedication and commitment to the Council and to the supplier community she serves,” said Cecelia H. Stowe, purchasing director for Henrico. “Marvis is extremely committed to not only the success of Henrico’s supplier program but also to ensuring that all suppliers have access to procurement opportunities.”

A certified professional public buyer with the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing since 1988, Marshall serves on the Council’s board of directors and is chairwoman of its certification committee. She also is a member of the SWAM (small, women-owned and minority-owned business) Task Committee for the Virginia Department of Small Business and Supplier Diversity.

Marshall began her work for Henrico in 2008, after the Board of Supervisors adopted a policy to promote participation with SWAM businesses.
